Hone Those Jam Skills With Pete Wernick

Jam Camp precedes Grey Fox July 11-14

Jeffrey Anzevino

Many of us have invested hundreds – if not thousands – of dollars in an instrument that we hope will bring joy and camaraderie into our lives through music. Sadly, many of these instruments lie in their cases stuffed away in the back of closets never to see the light of day. Or maybe the instrument actually gets played, but only within earshot of its owner and never to be heard in the accompaniment of others. While it is certainly preferable to play that instrument – even if only for your own enjoyment — than to let it lie in state in its coffin, your playing will jump to the next level by learning to jam with your friends and family.

While jamming at first isn't intuitively easy for everyone, with a little help, it is easy to overcome the pitfalls of the isolated player, who might learn to play songs, but may never enjoy the musical communication that results from a good, old-fashioned jam session.

Fortunately, one of Bluegrass music's most prominent figures, Peter Wernick will be conducting a "Bluegrass Jam Camp" from July 11-14 in Copake, NY, preceding the Grey Fox Bluegrass Festival. This is one of eight Jam Camps he will hold this year,

Peter Wernick conducts 11 jam camps this year, including one July 11-14 at Copake, NY in conjunction with the Grey Fox Bluegrass Festival including one just concluded at the Strawberry Park Festival in Preston, CT.

Pete, or Doctor Banjo, is perhaps best known as the banjoist for Hot Rize, a band enjoying a long touring and

Message from the President
Pay as you are able

I have been asked at a recent jam session why HVBA dues are so low? Our annual dues are just $10 per household and we'd like to keep it that way. We don't want to deny anyone membership in the HVBA because they can't afford the dues.

However, we are well aware that at $10 a year we are practically giving away our membership. It was suggested that we make it known to our members that the $10 should be considered a minimum. If your finances permit, please consider an additional donation above and beyond the $10 dues. Donations exceeding the $10 dues are tax deductible as the HVBA is a 501(c)3 arts and education institution.

This newsletter, Jamboree, is our biggest annual expense. It costs us about $200 to print and $74 to mail, which totals nearly $1,100 annually. We could, I suppose, save money by posting the newsletter online and foregoing the mailing of the old-fashioned paper copies. But, not everyone yet is online, and I've heard from many people who like to save their back issues.

Thanks to Peter Wernick for advertising the Bluegrass Jam Camp in both Summer issues. If you could benefit by honing your jamming skills and are free July 11-14, please do yourself a solid and consider attending.

Do you have a business that might benefit by exposure to our HVBA members? Our ads are reasonable. Or, simply send an donation beyond the $10 dues and you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that you're keeping the HVBA strong.

Alison Brown at The Towne Crier

Joseph Whelan

On May 6, The Alison Brown Quartet appeared at the Towne Crier in Pawling NY., a restaurant well known for the quality of the food as well as its performers. The Jazz/Bluegrass quartet consists of Garry West (Bass), John R. Burr (Piano), Kendrick Freeman (Drums) and the renowned Alison Brown, a virtuoso, on 5 String Banjo. Alison is also an accomplished guitarist and composes most of the instrumentals on her CDs. Joe Craven guest performed on fiddle and mandolin.

The Quartet played selections from their new CD, "Stolen Moments", produced by Alison and her husband Garry West, on the Compass Label, which they co-own. This recording has guests like Sam Bush on mandolin, Stuart Duncan on fiddle, and 10 or so others on lead vocals and a slew of other instruments. One selection, "One Morning in May" was co-written by Bill Keith.

The quartet also played selections from Fair Weather, which was nominated for a 2001 Grammy "Best Bluegrass Album" and won a Grammy for the instrumental, written by Alison, Leaving Cottdale (Alison /Bela Fleck/Sam Bush).

Stuart Duncan played fiddle with Alison when she was a teen in the San Diego Bluegrass Society and recorded an instrumental album with her. She has played banjo since the age of 10. Alison also won the Canadian National Banjo Championship even before attending

Harvard and subsequently UCLA (for an MBA). In 1991, Alison's banjo playing and Duncan's mandolin playing helped Alison Krauss' I've Got That Old Feeling, earn the IBMA "Album of the Year". In that year Alison was also named the first female "Banjo Performer of the Year".

The Quartet's repertoire is acoustic, diverse and beautiful. Most apparent to me was the broad role of the banjo in interpreting roots music via Jazz and other genres. It is significant that the movement of Bluegrass into popular music began in 1991 with the I've Got That Old Feeling album on which piano and drums were prominent. Would Bluegrass stalwarts be miffed at Alison's seeming move away from "pure" Bluegrass? Alison's view is summed up by her comment to me: "everything I do is rooted in Bluegrass." 🎸

Fiery Mountain Music

The Biscuit Burners

IDR5072

I had the good fortune of seeing The Biscuit Burners in a rare New York State appearance at River Station in Poughkeepsie. I had not heard their music before but took a chance and exchanged my sunny, May afternoon for a few hours of bluegrass. A good move, as it turns out.

Not that you completely sacrifice the outdoors when you sit upstairs at River Station. Large windows on three sides provide views of the Hudson River, rolling hills and the park below. An excellent backdrop for these young musicians whose sincere enjoyment in playing music is obvious. I liked what I heard and quickly purchased their debut CD Fiery Mountain Music during a set break.

This CD is 80% original music, 20% covers. The originals are largely written by Shannon Whitworth, vocalist, guitar and banjo player. Her voice is deeper than the petite Mary Lucey (introduced during the show as "the littlest woman on the biggest instrument") who plays the bass. Mary's voice is the sunlight to Shannon's moonlight. The women do all the vocals on this CD and their voices blend beautifully, though there's a tendency to overuse the device of olde timey "twang" now and again.

While there is plenty of pepper in this music, not all of the songs are "fiery." Prayer of the Moonlight and Hot August Evening are unhurried and thoughtful pieces allowing you to catch your breath between songs.

Billy Cardine's accomplished dobro playing is terrific both live and on the CD. Dan Bletz on guitar more than ably backs up anything his band mates can lay down.

Both he and Billy shine in the original instrumental Cow and Sake but perhaps even more brilliantly in Mermon, described in the liner notes as "a nautical tribute to the great Bill Monroe."

Other fine moments on this CD:

If the motion of that river in Bakerstown is represented by banjo and dobro, then it is rapid and bubbly indeed.

Bakerstown
Once Upon A Time
Autry's Peach Orchard
Prayer of the Moonlight
Mountain Lily
If I Fall
Cow and Sake
Come On Darlin'
Mono County Jail
Mermon
Hot August Evening
Red Mountain Wine

There's a feast of lively pickin' in "Autry's Peach Orchard", originally written by Tut Taylor. Just try not to tap your toes to this one!

Come on Darlin' is a song where Billy's dobro weaves in and around the singers' voices like a dancer whose had too much to drink but manages one incredibly graceful swoop and twirl after another. The result: your entertainment and amazement.

Though the CD is produced by the band "in a small bedroom in Swannanoa, NC" the quality is first rate. (Please note that the dog faces on the cover are those of each band member's own beloved pup.)

If you're not yet convinced that this CD is for you, check out The Biscuit Burners website, for downloadable samples of this music as well as tour dates.

Hot Tin Roof

Some (if not all) of the members of "Tin Roof," along with their good friend Jerry Oland, will be playing the Poughkeepsie Farmers Market on July 8th.

We heard that Rachel Handman is planning to enter the New England Fiddle contest. By press time, the contest held on May 28th will be over and we sure hope she has taken first place. This Hartford, CT event is probably the largest fiddle contest in the northeast, drawing fiddlers from North Carolina to Canada and attracting literally thousands of people! Wayne Fugate will be playing backup for her. She took second place in the "Championship Division" in 2002.

Wayne was lucky enough to play two sold out Patsy Cline Tribute shows at Bodles earlier in May and the monthly bluegrass jams at the Warwick Valley Winery that hosted by Wayne, along with Mike Baglione and Suzy Arnowitz seem to be going very well ... 1st Saturday of the month from 2-5PM www.vvwinery.com or (845) 258-4858 for more info ... musicians of all levels warmly welcomed and enthusiastically supported!

Will Solomon/Doc Marshalls

Work is progressing on Will Solomon's solo project, which will include several original songs and one cover featuring Casey Driessen (fiddle), Josh Graves (dobro), Noam Pikelnny (banjo), Josh Williams (backup vocals), Mark Fain (bass), Cody Kilby (guitar), and Andy Hall (dobro) among others. We look forward to hearing Will's CD, which is sure to be outstanding!

Look for footage of the Doc's on ESPN 2 whose crew filmed the DMs playing their Cajun music at the Chelsea Piers in Manhattan at the conclusion of a fishing tournament.

The Docs played the Mercury Lounge on Houston St. in Manhattan in May and will perform again in NYC (in Battery Park), as part of a celebration of Cajun culture in mid-July. Visit www.docmarshalls.com for more information.

Saturday Night Bluegrass Band

Word of mouth about the Bluegrass Clubhouse Thursdays at the Colony Café in Woodstock is slowly leaking out. Guests so far have included The Dwyer Family, the great singer-songwriter Tom Pacheco, and, recently past week, John Herald did a set with the band...as usual, the band is Brian Hollander, guitar, Dobro and vocals; Tim Kapeluck on mandolin, fiddle and vocals; Geoff Harden on bass, fiddle and vocals; Guy 'Fooch' Fishetti on fiddle and pedal steel; and Bill Keith on banjo.

Music starts between 7:30 and 8 p.m., every Thursday (except for one night off on June 23) is informal and audience can pay what they would like. The Colony is on Rock City Road in Woodstock.

Willow Creek

The Willow Creek Bluegrass festival is upon us June 24-26. Don't miss all the fun and several great bands: Dan Paisley & the Southern Grass, The Hunger Mountain Boys, Straight Drive, James Reams and the Barnstormers, Cabin Fever, Oxford Depot, Hippies and Hillbillies, Blue Plate Special, McMule, Heavy Traffic, and The Hudson River Cloggers. ## Bluegrass Jam Camp precedes Grey Fox recording career inspiring tens of thousands of fans across the world. But Wernick has also dedicated much of his life to promoting Bluegrass music and to teaching how to play Bluegrass with others. Pete was the first President of the International Bluegrass Music Association and served in that capacity for 16 years until stepping down in 2001.

The genesis of these camps dates back 25 years to 1980 when Pete was asked to conduct a five-day banjo course at a Portland (OR) State University summer program, which quickly sold out. By 1984, he was teaching two camps each year in Colorado. He discovered that many banjo players that came for instruction had little or no experience playing along with other musicians. With the benefit of a few relatively simple jamming skills their banjo playing improved, but, perhaps more importantly, they found they could also play in the context of a group. This same "isolation problem" exists with other instruments and Pete's Bluegrass Jam Camp is designed to overcome this obstacle and demonstrate how easy playing along with other people can be.

"Closet players often end up self-destructing," says Wernick, "losing interest because it's not what they expected. The crowning blow is when they attend a jam and find that they don't know how to fit in." The Jam Camp teaches the budding musician how to navigate this new subculture: the head nod (ready for your solo?), the lifted foot (let's end the song), etc. Once this language is learned, you'll have the keys to unlock what turns out to be a not so complicated puzzle.

"Bluegrass is NOT a spectator sport," says Wernick, "People are surprised to see that the first step of the ladder is really quite close to the ground." With a little help from Pete and his excellent "coaches," you will be climbing the ladder to musical enjoyment, morphing from a closet picker to a sociable jammer in no time. Assisting Wernick is his wife of 31 years, Joan, who plays guitar, and multi-instrumentalists Ira Gitlin and Brian Wicklund.

The camp is held at the Grange Hall in Copake, just a few minutes from the renowned Grey Fox Bluegrass Festival in Ancramdale. Wernick likes hosting the sessions in Grange Halls because they have served as rural meeting places across America and have a tradition of hosting music and dances throughout the years.

Warmth, comfort, dazzle excitement all under one Tin Roof

Eugene Martinez

Tin Roof is the new acoustic band that brings together some of the finest musicians in the Hudson Valley. Its sound - tight, energetic and exciting and at the same time warm, sophisticated and mature - has its feet solidly in American traditional and Bluegrass music while it's head flies with the varied influences brought to it by its members. Tin Roof is musical synergy personified!

Who is Tin Roof? After having played as a duo and been the driving force behind the bluegrass band, Oxford Depot, Suzy Arnowitz (tenor guitar, vocals) and Mike Baglione (guitar, vocals) called on some of their musical friends to form this exciting new group.

Rachel Handman, a classically trained violinist, is an accomplished, emotive fiddler who plays with nuanced energy. She works professionally as a member of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic, and has many recordings under her belt.

Phil Helm, bass, is also a classically trained musician, is Principle Bassist of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and Acting Assistant Principle Bassist of the Albany Symphony Orchestra. Like Rachel, Phil is an alumnus of Barebones & Wildflowers and has recorded with a variety of Bluegrass and Folk artists.

Last but never least, Wayne Fugate, master of an awesome array of musical styles and genres - each performed with great professionalism and warmth. Notwithstanding the often lousy jokes he tends to crack on stage, he is revered by his fans, the Wayniacs.

Put this group of artists on a stage - you get an unforgettable musical experience. Their debut at the epicenter of culture in the Hudson Valley, Bodles Opera House in Chester, NY, filled the house, and their more recent appearance at the Apple Blossom Festival at the Warwick Valley Winery was the highpoint of the day. The energy they generated, playing such tunes as Big City, Breakdown 101 and (my personal favorite) Glory at the Meeting House / Abe's Retreat had the folks on their feet, clamoring for more.

This is definitely THE band to keep your ear on - we'll be hearing a lot more of them!

Jimmy Martin

In 1972 Martin teamed up with The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and Roy Acuff, Earl Scruggs, Mother Maybelle Carter, Merle Travis, and Doc Watson, to record the gold three-record set, Will the Circle be Unbroken. Martin sang the Grand Ole Opry Song, Losing You, Sunny Side of the Mountain, My Walking Shoes, and You Don't Don't My Mind.

In 1995 Jimmy Martin was inducted into the International Bluegrass Hall of Honor. In 2003, Martin was the subject of an independently produced documentary entitled King of Bluegrass: The Life and Times of Jimmy Martin, which was accompanied by a companion CD of rare live recordings of Martin, entitled Don't Cry to Me.

Jam Camp

To benefit from the camp, you don't need a mastery of musical skills. The curriculum is designed for beginners. All you need to know is four chords – G, A, C, and D – and how to change smoothly between the chords. "We make people self-sufficient jammers by breaking them into small groups," says Wernick. On the last day of the camp, Thursday, the jammers ascend Grey Fox's famed "hill" take the stage and play together for the audience.

Pete's bluegrass roots were planted in New York City, where in the 60s he learned to play the banjo by closely studying Earl Scruggs records. "I would ride the subway from my home in The Bronx to jam in Washington Square Park," says Wernick. There, he played with the likes of David Grisman, Jody Stecher, Steve Arkin and Winnie Winston. Soon thereafter, he found himself in his first band – The Orange Mountain Boys, based across the Hudson River in New Jersey.

In 1964, at age 18, he started teaching banjo. Nine years later he wrote Bluegrass Banjo, which has sold nearly 250,000 copies. While studying sociology at Columbia University, where he earned a Ph.D., Wernick hosted New York's sole bluegrass radio show in the 1960's.

Refreshments were available for purchase and included coffee, soft drinks, water, and cookies, and really good pound cake.

Following the refreshment break, Mike Burns and North Country took the floor. For the next hour we were entertained by Mike's band. Mike (guitar), Kevin Lynch (mandolin), Ethan Kende (bass), Ben Freed (banjo) and Tom Hagynase (fiddle) kept the up tempo songs coming. Most of them were written by Wernick's fruitful career with Country Cooking and Hot Rize and array of publications, awards and accomplishments is simply too extensive to be covered in this forum. Suffice it to say, however, this most prominent figure in Bluegrass music over the past 30 years is coming to town and is eager to share with you his knowledge about what it takes to jam with others.

Mike over the years. Ben did Polka on a Banjo which made me want to get up and dance to it. North Country had a real driving bluegrass sound to it and gets better and better.

So please the Lake Purdys Clubhouse in mind as great venue to hear bluegrass and help Mike make it successful. It sure is nice to only drive less than 30 minutes for good bluegrass music. Good Luck with this Mike.

Bluegrass back in Somers

Joyce Cullen

On Saturday night, May 21, a new bluegrass series was started. Mike Burns brought the return of bluegrass concerts to the Somers. If you remember a few years ago Mike sponsored a number of concerts at St. Lukes Church in Somers. That location is no longer available. Just a few miles away, the cozy Lake Purdys Clubhouse was put into service as a new venue. Mike hopes to have monthly concerts there starting in the fall. He said he wants to feature local bands. So keep your eyes and ears open for news of the next one. Jams will precede the concerts so bring your instruments and prepare to have fun!

Too Blue opened to a packed clubhouse about 8PM. Joan Harrison (banjo), Betsy Rome (guitar), Mike Sassano (mandolin) and Jack Murphy (bass) played and sang their combination of bluesy swing and bluegrass. Many of the tunes were written by members of the band and some old standards were also included. Jack Murphy came out of the back to sing Brown Mountain Light, a song I remember from the days of radio on Saturday night. The audience really liked the music. After their set, a short intermission took place.

Celebrating the memory of Jimmy Martin

The "King of Bluegrass"

Jeffrey Anzevino

Bluegrass music lost a legend on May 14 when Jimmy Martin, the "King of Bluegrass" died at age 77 after a year-long bout with bladder cancer.

He was born in Sneedville (Hancock County) Tennessee. Dirt poor, Martin made his first guitar from a Prince Albert tobacco can. Later, at age 10, he hunted possums and sold the skins to buy a "real" guitar.

At age 21, Martin was fired for "singing on the job" at the factory where he worked. Not to be deterred, he then went to the Grand Ole Opry and talked his way backstage, where he persuaded bluegrass legend Bill Monroe to sing a couple of songs with him.

This impromptu audition in 1949 earned him a spot in Monroe's band as a Bluegrass Boy, where he performed as emcee, guitarist and lead singer until 1953. Martin's hard-driving rhythm guitar playing helped change the sound of Monroe's band. His strong, high vocal range pushed Monroe's tenor up into the sky, creating what has become known as the "high lonesome" sound. Jimmy Martin and Bill Monroe recorded such classics as The Little Girl and the Dreadful Snake, Uncle Pen, A Voice From On High, Sitting Alone in the Moonlight, Walking in Jerusalem, among many others.

After departing the Bluegrass Boys, Martin flourished in his own right, forming his own band, The Sunny Mountain Boys, which included alums JD Crowe and Doyle Lawson, and recorded on Decca Records (now MCA) for many years. Some of his best known recordings include Sunny Side of the Mountain, Hit Parade of Love, 20/20 Vision, Ocean of Diamonds, and Freeborn Man.

Jimmy Martin and The Sunny Mountain Boys appeared as regulars on the WJR Barn Dance in Detroit. He later headlined the famous Louisiana Hayride in Shreveport for three years. He joined WWVA's Wheeling (WV) Jamboree in 1960 and in 1963 moved to Nashville, where he appeared on The Grand Ole Opry. To his disappointment, he was never invited to become a regular member of the Opry, possibly because of his brash behavior.

Martin, however, made no apologies stating "in a 2002 newspaper interview "I'm just an old country boy with a third-grade education and I'm liable to say anything."

"People have told me they enjoy the way I play bluegrass music and it makes me real happy.

You know, there's two kinds of tears that you shed in this world and that's the tears of sadness and the tears of happiness.

You're looking at a man who has shed 'em all. But bluegrass music and country music has been good to me and I've loved it."

Jimmy Martin, from an interview in King of Bluegrass: The Life and Times of Jimmy Martin
